Followers of the prize ring in the United States have often wondered how the different weights for boxers originated. Inder the old rulings the bantam-weight limit was 112 pounds, the feather-weight 126 pounds, the light-weight 133 pounds, and the middle-weight 158 pounds. innovations were 142 pounds for a weiterweight limit, and the light-heavy-weight limit indefinitely fixed around 170 pounds. As the civilized world counts in decimals these days, it might have been supposed that the figures would have been 115, 125, 155, &c.
